

STUDENTS HEAR COLLEGE SERMON

Commencement Exercises Begin With Address by Dr. Taylor, of Petersburg.

GET REPORTS ON NEW HOME

Trustees Expected to Announce Opening Date at West-hampton.

Richmond College commencement exercises began last night with the baccalaureate sermon, delivered by Rev. W. C. Taylor, D. D., of Petersburg, in the college chapel, before a large audience, made up of the student body, members of the faculty and board of trustees, and friends of the institution from all parts of the city.

Dr. Taylor took as his text 2 Corinthians iv, 18: "For the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are unseen are eternal." He said that the highest type of civilization is that in which all men have their capacities developed to the fullest extent and their powers at work. These capacities and powers, he held, are of a dual nature. Science and philosophy lead a man to know the self and the world about him; religion teaches man to know the unseen. He enlarged upon the importance of faith in everyday life and affairs, and pictured the Apostle Paul's triumph over difficulties and seeming misfortunes through his sublime faith in the unseen. The insufficiency of pure scholarship was strongly set forth, and the graduates were exhorted to know not only the things of the material world, but also to know and to show forth in their lives the fundamental and eternal principles of the Christian religion.

The singing was led by the College Glee Club. Howard D. Bryant, who has trained the club, sang a solo, accompanied by D. R. Anderson on the piano. Dr. Charles H. Ryland offered the invocation. Charles D. Gardner, D. D., of Louisville, conducted the service, prayer being offered by Rev. H. W. Providence, an alumnus of the institution, now on a furlough from mission work in China.

Class Celebration To-Night.

The class of 1911 will hold its celebration to-night. R. C. Duval is the orator for the academic class. Walter Severely is historian. A. R. Kershaw will read the Law Class history, and S. W. Shelton will deliver the oration on behalf of the law graduates. The board of trustees meets to-morrow at 11 o'clock. To-morrow evening comes the annual reunion of the alumni, when a baccalaureate service will be held. The annual alumni dinner will follow at the Business Men's Club. After dinner speakers will be Rev. J. M. Pletcher, D. D., Professor E. B. Pollard and John S. Kershaw, representing the classes of fifty, twenty-five and ten years ago. A. O. Lynch will represent the graduates of the current year—the class of 1911.

The commencement exercises proper occur on Wednesday morning in the college chapel, following an imposing academic procession of undergraduates, candidates for degrees of various grades, alumni, faculty, candidates for honorary degrees and members of the board of trustees. The commencement orator on Wednesday will be Professor C. Alphonso Smith, of the University of Virginia. Honorary degrees, honorary degrees and diplomas will then be awarded, and the session of 1910-1911 will have come to a close.

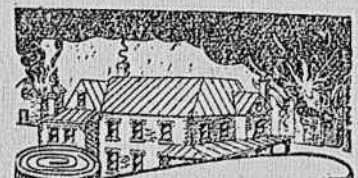

Plans for New College.

The feature of interest in this year's meeting of the board of trustees, besides the general plans for the work of the college, is the report of the building committee, which has in hand preparation of plans for the new heart of the college at Westhampton. The date will probably be fixed for opening the college in its new quarters probably in September, 1913. The board will also discuss plans for continuing the work of the institution meanwhile, and make temporary provision by authorizing the renting of outside houses to take the place of the north wing of the main college building destroyed by fire on Christmas morning.

An important report is also to be submitted by the finance committee, having to do with financing the scheme for the new college building. Under the plans adopted an imposing group of buildings is proposed, some of which will be erected at once, while others will follow as funds are available. The college expects to realize a large sum from the sale of the tract at present occupied, which stands in the heart of the residential section of Richmond at the beginning of Monument Avenue.

Was Strangled to Death.

Coroner Taylor yesterday morning viewed the body of Joseph Davis, colored, who the police believe, was murdered Saturday night and then thrown into a cellar of the house of Joseph Pettus, 1711 East Grace Street. A stab wound was found in the man's neck, and this Coroner Taylor decided was the cause of death. An inquest will be held at 10 o'clock this morning. Pettus and Virginia Willis, said to have been the dead man's associates, were arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the crime.

SCREAMS LED TO HIS ARREST AS BURGGLAR

Dennis McCarthy Fell and Broke Leg, Then Had Police Arrest His Wife on Charge of Bigamy—Man Dropped From Third Story.

Lying half-dead and with a broken leg in the bottom of an open area-way in the rear of the Bailey Furniture Company, 1406 East Main Street, Dennis J. McCarthy, of Savannah, Ga., called the police to his rescue early yesterday morning, and was later arrested on suspicion of having attempted to commit burglary and of being a fugitive from justice from Georgia.

After being taken to the City Hospital, where he was placed under guard, the man made, according to the police, a remarkable confession. His first husband, he declared, was a bigamist, his first husband being Herman Murken, of Savannah. McCarthy claims that he ran away with her and married her in Baltimore. He urged that she be also arrested, though for what reason he would not state. The detective, Sergeant Wiley and Policeman Brady, went later to her room at 1410 East Main Street, and rousing her from her sleep, placed her under arrest and locked her up in the First Police Station.

Officer Heard Screams.

The first alarm came about 3 o'clock, while Policeman Brady was patrolling his beat. He heard the screams of a man in distress, and, after some search, located the sounds in the rear of the Bailey Furniture Company's store. Out into the darkness he could not see the man, but McCarthy, lying from the shock of a fall from the third story of the store and from his broken leg, still shouted lustily for help. He was down in the bottom of the area-way, twenty-five feet from a small porch in the rear of the store. Calling several negroes to his aid, Policeman Brady procured a ladder, and with great difficulty brought McCarthy to the surface. To repeated questions as to the cause of his fall McCarthy answered that he had fallen from the railing of the rear porch, but suspicion was aroused by the fact that he was without his hat and one shoe.

Then Wiley and Brady proceeded to make an investigation. They noticed again that all the electric light and telephone wires were broken, as if a heavy body had fallen against them, and later, as the dawn began to break, they saw the outline of a man hanging from the eaves of the roof. By putting two ladders together, Policeman Brady ascended to the roof, and there found both McCarthy's hat and a missing shoe. From the perilous height, the officer looked down and wondered how McCarthy had escaped with his life.

With this ample proof that the man's first story had not been the truth, the officers went to the City Hospital, and treated the injured man with the evidence they had gained.

"Well, I might as well tell the truth," he said, turning in his bed. He told them that, accompanied by another man whom he had met only a short time before, and whose name he did not know, he had climbed to the top of the roof to watch a fire. The window of whose room could be seen from that point. He denied emphatically that he had intended to commit burglary. He stated that he climbed to the roof by the gutter pipe, but the officers discredit his story, and he seemed to them a human impossibility for any man to climb three stories by the slender gutter pipe they saw. Their theory is that he scaled the walls of the house adjoining, 1404 East Main Street, and then he dropped one window to the other until he reached the second story, and then reached out and climbed the rest of the way by the pipe.

Lost His Balance.

On the roof McCarthy, after taking off his hat and shoe, with the intention of apparently of taking off both shoes, lost his balance and fell. He clutched at the wires as he dropped, and one by one they gave way beneath his weight. On the last wire, a large insulator, he dangled a few minutes before it broke, and he dropped sheer into the deep area-way. He said that he shouted and screamed for twenty minutes before his cries were answered. His companion, he stated, climbed down and deserted him.

In his anxiety to save his life, McCarthy told the story of his runaway marriage, which she later admitted to be true. Her first husband, both say, is Herman Murken, who lives at 538 East Gordon Street.

POLICE OFFICERS THOUGHT THEY WERE ON MURDER TRAIL

But After Following Negroes to Gillie's Creek, They Came Across Night Baptism Scene, Which They Did Not Interrupt.

Considering all the thousand and one different shades of religious belief, a negro family named Brown, living at 324 North Thirtieth Street, has evolved a new creed all its own, and the members call themselves the Holy and Sanctified Christians, believing that they will live immortal, never knowing the sting of death unless brought down by the hand of an assassin.

A few nights ago, while Sergeant Sherry and a patrolman, dressed in plain clothes, were ambulating around Church Hill in search of stray and suspicious characters, they met John Gillie's Creek. In the party were three small children, two of them babes in arms, and the officers scented crime. They followed Brown and his family to the creek, thinking that the man was preparing to drown the children.

Explanations were demanded, and Brown informed the officers of his religious fantasy, and the latter stood Savannah. He is a lumber inspector by occupation. According to their story, McCarthy and Mrs. Murken ran away from Savannah in October, 1910, and went to Baltimore, where they lived until the suspicions of others in the house became aroused. One day the landlady came to them, and asked to see the marriage license. Mrs. Murken said that she had lost it, and when McCarthy came in from his work she informed him of the request of the suspicious landlady. Then, she says, she gave McCarthy $5 with which to purchase a license, and afterwards they were married, each fully cognizant of the desperate step they were taking.

Went Back to Savannah.

Afterwards she tried McCarthy, and returned to Savannah. McCarthy followed, desperately jealous. He tried to effect a meeting between himself and the woman, she told the officer, and she shot through the left shoulder by her husband, McCarthy also admitted this to be true and exhibited the souvenir bullet in evidence. For weeks he lay in a hospital. After his departure Mrs. Murken met him again, and again they ran away.

They arrived in Richmond on May 13, and for a time boarded at Mrs. White's, Fifteenth and Main Streets. McCarthy informed the police that he was an iron molder by trade, and that he had been working here at one of the local iron foundries. McCarthy, who was an iron molder by trade, and that he had been working here at one of the local iron foundries. McCarthy, who was an iron molder by trade, and that he had been working here at one of the local iron foundries.

Captain McMahon wrote to the Savannah chief of police, asking if the pair were wanted there, and both will be held pending a reply. In the meantime McCarthy will have to appear in Police Court to give an explanation of his presence on the roof of the Bailey Furniture Company, for his statement that he climbed there simply to watch his wife is held to be far from the truth, and other designs are suspected.

Murdered at Age of Fifteen.

Mrs. McCarthy, or Murken, was married in South Carolina, she informed Sergeant Wiley, when she was fifteen years old, and is now the mother of five children. Before running away, she sold her house, dividing all the money, except $300, which she kept for herself, among her five children. She exhibited a bank book to show that she has $195 on deposit in the National Bank of Virginia, and pleaded that neither of her "husbands" be informed of her petty wealth.

Her youngest child is thirty years old. She is five feet three inches tall, small, and attractive looking. But her face is marked with the lines of care and worry, and when she was arrested she took matters with the utmost calmness. She had expected it, she said, and knew that it was only a matter of time before she fell into the toils of the law. She realizes her position before the eyes of the law, and seems to fear both Murken and McCarthy. Had she learned of McCarthy's arrest, she would have committed suicide, she said. She was closely watched in her cell last night, it being feared that she might attempt to carry out her threat.

McCarthy's leg is broken between the knee and ankle, and is a bad fracture, but there are no other wounds. He gave his age as twenty-seven years. He is dark, and is five feet seven inches tall.

Boy Bohemian Found.

After he had been living the life of a Bohemian for a week, Joe Smith, upon whom the officers of night shift summers have fallen, was found last night by Officer Williams, and returned to the home of his family, at 600 Mosby Street.

The boy was asleep in a stable loft when discovered. He had with him a blanket, which he took when he left his home, and he had several of his companions' names upon the blanket. He was found in the streets and nights in stable lofts and hen houses.

The officers still watched and waited. The women suggested that there might be a fire somewhere, but Sergeant Sherry, still a little suspicious, refused to take the hint and remained. Then Clara, dressed in a white gown, wife and mother, stepped down into the water, followed by her mother, Della, and her daughters—May, aged fifteen, and Rebecca, aged one and a half years. John baptized them, and the little children went gurgling unaltered in the flowing stream without a whimper.

Then the family returned home. Brown is originator of the new creed. He dreamed a dream and saw a vision, and his dream was that he would never die unless struck down by a madman. Gillie's Creek was his Sloan's pool, the river of Jordan flowing by his door. Sergeant Sherry shook his head and pondered on the ways of men.

BANKERS MEET AT HOT SPRINGS

Plans for Great Convention at Homestead Hotel This Week.

RICHMOND MEN TO TAKE PART

Congressman Vreeland to Speak on Proposed Currency Legislation.

Representatives of all of the Richmond banks will leave this week for the eighteenth annual convention of the Virginia Bankers' Association, which will be held at the Homestead Hotel, Virginia Hot Springs, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Oliver J. Sands, president of the American National Bank; Thomas Branch McAdams, cashier of the Merchants National, and C. C. Barksdale, chief examiner of the Department of Banking, State Corporation Commission, are among those who will deliver addresses.

The association has rendered a valuable service to the banking business by its annual gatherings to discuss problems affecting business from every viewpoint. It has been a source from which has come much legislation for the betterment of banking conditions, and the elimination of the banking world of wildcat schemes and unsound ventures. The meeting last year was held at the Chamberlain Hotel, Old Point, and was attended by many Richmond bankers.

Besides a number of formal addresses on matters of importance to the banking world, there was a general debate on the working of the new State banking examination law, which had then been only recently adopted, and was yet to be put into effect. Many practical suggestions were made as to meeting the requirements of the new law. The organization aims to promote the general welfare and usefulness of banks and banking institutions, State and national; to secure uniformity of action and the practical benefits of personal acquaintance and discussion of subjects of importance to commercial interests of the State.

Officers and Committees.

The present officers are: J. W. Miller, cashier of the People's Bank of Palski, president; E. P. Miller, president First National Bank, Lynchburg, vice-president; T. F. Tilghman, cashier Citizens Bank, Norfolk, vice-president; B. G. Vance, cashier First National Bank, Waynesboro, vice-president; J. W. Bell, president First National Bank, Abingdon, vice-president; W. M. Addison, cashier National Bank of Virginia, Richmond, vice-president; Julian H. Ball, president National State and City Bank, Lynchburg, secretary; H. N. Phillips, chairman, cashier Peninsula Bank, Williamsburg; E. P. Miller, president First National Bank, Lynchburg; T. F. Tilghman, cashier Citizens Bank, Norfolk; B. G. Vance, cashier First National Bank, Waynesboro; J. W. Bell, president First National Bank, Abingdon; W. M. Addison, cashier National Bank of Virginia, Richmond; B. Petersburg, cashier National Bank of Petersburg; Walker Scott, cashier Planters Bank of Farmville; Norman H. Williams, president First National Bank, Chase City.

Reports are to be presented at this meeting by the following committees: Jurisprudence, George Bryan, chairman; Committee of Virginia Bankers' Association, Finance, J. W. Sinton, chairman, vice-president National State and City Bank, Richmond; Taxation, O. J. Sands, chairman, president American National Bank, Richmond; The representative of the Virginia Bankers' Association, the executive council of the American Bankers' Association is John M. Miller, Jr., first vice-president of the First National Bank.

The convention opens Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the ball room of the Homestead Hotel, the opening prayer to be delivered by Rev. John Garlick Scott, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Hot Springs. The annual address of President Miller will follow, after which come the reports of Secretary and Treasurer Hill, Attorney Bryan and from the standing committees. Among the speakers on Thursday afternoon will be Colonel Thomas Branch McAdams, cashier of the Merchants National Bank, Richmond, who announces his topic as "If." He will be followed by C. C. Barksdale, chief bank examiner, Department of Banking, State Corporation Commission.

The chief address on Friday morning will be by Congressman Edward B. Vreeland of New York, vice-chairman of the National Monetary Commission, whose topic will be "Proposed Banking and Currency Legislation." He will be followed by Frank O. Watts, of Kentucky, Tennessee, president of the American Bankers' Association, who will speak on "The American Bankers' Association." The afternoon session on Friday opens with an address on "Matters of Interest to Virginia Bankers," by Oliver J. Sands, president of the American National Bank, Richmond, after which all members and visitors are invited to participate in a general discussion of matters pertaining to the banking business in Virginia. A business session will be held on Saturday morning to hear committing reports and for the election and installation of officers.

The annual banquet of the association will be held at the Homestead Hotel on Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, when there will be several speeches by invited guests.

TRAFFIC LAW TO UPPER BRANCH

Council Sends Measure There to Have Its Heart Put Back Again.

RENEW FIGHT ON THEATRE

Both Sides Still Claim Victory in Matter of Playhouse Near Church.

Although the Common Council did comparatively little last Monday night except to pass the anti-theatre law, it made up for lost time at the adjourned meeting Thursday night, transacting a large volume of business, which has been put in order for consideration of the Board of Aldermen to-morrow night. The docket includes an issue of $1,400,000 in improvement bonds, award of many contracts and concurrence in a number of ordinances.

The Aldermen will have another chance to discuss the traffic law, which, partly in joke and partly in earnest, was put to place last week, forty-seven of the forty-eight provisions for using the streets being eliminated. The Council unanimously refused to concur in any such amendment, and, as a substitute, sent practically the original ordinance back to the Board of Aldermen. The only important change from the original draft is a provision for protection of passengers alighting from street cars, who are at present in danger of being run down before they can reach the curbstone.

Both Claim Victory.

Both sides are claiming victory in the matter of concurrence in the anti-theatre law, with the chances for its adoption materially strengthened by the elimination of features which were held to be unconstitutional. There seems to be no doubt that the law adopted by the Common Council will stand the test of the courts—that it is within the province of the Council to enact such a law. Some members of the board, however, are doubtful of the policy of such a step, seeing little actual objection to the operation of a theatre on the corner projected. The Board may consider amendments rejected by the lower branch, making the new law not apply to any theatre contract for the erection of which the building permit for which had been issued previous to approval of the ordinance. As the situation stands, Henry Vallentyne, owner of the lot at Elizabeth and Grace Streets, has a permit to build on it a theatre to cost $85,000, according to plans approved by the Building Inspector. Complete drawings have been prepared, and a lease has been executed for a term of years, the theatre to be managed, headed by Jake Wells, which proposes to operate the playhouse.

If the act passed by the Common Council is concurred in and signed by the Mayor, prohibiting the issuance to any theatre located within 150 feet of a church of the license to operate as a theatre, Mr. Wells and his associates may find themselves with a theatre which the law prohibits their operating, though all the forms of the law have been complied with in regard to its erection.

Bond Issue.

There is no objection, apparently, to the bond issue, which is merely the financing of certain undertakings already voted on and approved by the Council, the carrying out of certain of the annexation agreements, providing for the cost of the new Mayo Bridge and site and for the purchase of the Ford Hotel block at the price agreed upon. The only danger of the bond issue ordinance failing to meet approval is in the event that efforts are made to add riders to the form proposed by the Committee on Finance. The lower branch rejected the amendment to issue bonds for a city hospital until some plan had been prepared for the erection and maintenance of such institution. The lower branch also rejected a street bond issue ordinance, holding that the way was not open for such a step at this time, or, in fact, until the State Legislature provides a method of assessing property damages to abutting property to be used principally for smooth paving and oiling. The annual budget carried more than one and a half million dollars for the streets, which the Finance Committee thinks is as much as can be wisely expended while the Engineer's office is otherwise overloaded.

Other meetings at the City Hall this week are the Committee on Water, Wednesday night; the Committee on Light, Markets and Grounds and Buildings, Thursday night, and the Committee on Streets, Cemeteries and Street Cleaning on Friday night.

BROKE IN CANDY STORE

Oscar Guthrow, Eight Years Old, Found All the Sweets He Wanted.

Climbing up the fire escape, Oscar Guthrow, eight years old, and two other small boys, yesterday morning entered the candy store of G. L. Williams, 7 South Fourteenth Street, and were making themselves at home with the candy when Officer Williams arrived.

Oscar attempted to hide, and locked himself in a closet. He was taken out, however, and carried to the First Station. The other two escaped, but will be arrested, as Policeman Williams knows their names.

Oscar, on account of his tender years, was paroled in the custody of his mother until his case is settled by Justice Crutchfield this morning.

SERMON IN SPANISH PUT INTO ENGLISH BY CUBAN

Unique Service at First Baptist Church by French-Swiss-Argentinian—Speaker Tells of Religious Activity and Mission Work.

Worshippers at the First Baptist Church last night were treated to a rare combination—a sermon in Spanish by a French-Swiss-Argentinian, translated by a Cuban. The preacher himself is as unique as his sermon.

In the absence of the pastor, the meeting was presided over by Rev. T. Bronson Ray, educational secretary of the Baptist Foreign Mission Board. He told of his visit last year to the South American mission field, and of some of the remarkable characters among the missionaries there.

Then he introduced Rev. Pablo Besson, of the Argentine Republic, who launched into a sermon in the soft Spanish tongue, punctuated by vivid gestures. Beside Mr. Besson stood E. G. Catu, of Cardenas, Cuba, who is a student at the University College of Medicine in this city, and who translated the address to the congregation as fluently as it was spoken.

Composite Training.

Mr. Besson described himself as born of French parentage in Switzerland. His father was a Presbyterian minister. The son was educated at two German universities, and after winning his degrees he became a Baptist. For this, he said, he was disinherited and cast off by his family. For years he went to Argentina, where he followed a little band of emigrants from Switzerland, becoming their pastor.

He found that Protestants were not permitted burial in any cemetery in the republic, and that Protestant children could not be registered, thus depriving them of rights of inheritance. Through his efforts he secured amendments to the laws in these respects.

Some years ago he recovered part of his family fortune, and is now a man of independent means, prosecuting mission work while giving to it instead of receiving from it, and is under no mission board.

He ended his remarks with a few words in English, spoken, naturally, with a strong Spanish intonation.

Rossian Par Excellence.

American political bosses and manipulators of machines might get some points from a local boss in Brazil, according to Dr. Ray, of the service. He said the American machine isn't in it when compared to those run in the South American country, where the district leader has practically the power of life and death. He controls politics by a simple and direct method. When advised how many votes are needed by a political party, the Brazilian boss waits until the polls are closed. He halts the opposition, he opens the polls, he takes out enough of the votes of the opposition to suit his purpose, tears them up, and permits the count to proceed. For directness of action, Dr. Ray thought, this method could not be excelled.

This was told apropos of a local boss who was converted as a result of the Brazilian missions.

MISS RUTH HART MR. LEARY'S BRIDE

Telegrams From Washington Announce That They Are Married.

Annual Meeting and Election of Officers to Be Held To-Day.

Four years old to-day, the Business Men's Club, of Richmond, will hold its annual meeting in its home on the top floor of the American National Bank Building at 2:30 o'clock. Polls will be open from 12 to 2:30, when the results of the election for five directors will be announced, following the annual report of President N. D. Sills.

A nominating committee has proposed the following ten names for the five vacancies on the board of directors, out of which the five receiving the highest vote will be declared elected for a term of three years: T. M. Carrington, Alvin M. Smith, H. S. Binswanger, E. Randolph Williams, Walter D. Thomas, G. L. Fairbanks, Robert Lecky, Jr., George C. Gregory, Arthur Levy, W. S. P. Mayo. For a vacancy in the board having a two-year term, the committee recommended a strong advocate of the club, W. Withers Miller, of whom it is receiving the highest number of votes will be declared elected. A number of matters of interest are to be discussed at the annual meeting, including a proposition on behalf of a number of members who urge that the club should take more active and vital part in civic movements for the advancement of Richmond commercially and otherwise.

Serves Valuable Purpose.

The club was organized largely with this end in view, and to some extent serves that purpose through providing a convenient meeting place, and an opportunity for conference and acquaintance among the business men of the city. But some members of the club urge that the organization, now well on its feet, should go further, and take itself a real power in the community, and a strong arm of the Chamber of Commerce, working in harmony with that body, and in no sense antagonistic to its efforts.

The year just closed has brought many changes to the club, giving it a larger opportunity than ever before. The new rooms were occupied September 12, 1910, having been arranged especially for club purposes when the building was erected. A fitting and appointments it compares favorably with any downtown club of the larger cities, and one which has been widely commended upon its wonderful view of the city from the windows in every direction, showing the smoke rising from a hundred factories, and busy railway yards in every direction. The rooms are above the dust and din of the city, and away from street noises and confusion. The club has shown a steady increase in its membership and attendance at the noon-day luncheon. The conference room has been used almost daily, and it is known that the club, with its facilities, has given an account of many great business enterprises in the past year.
